Edward J. Newell, former attorney for George A. Sipp, proprietor of the notorious Baltic Hotel in Harlem, tothan was without counsel and the pleadings were adjourned until to-morrow. Hall was fixed at $5,000 for each.

Although Murtha and Hussey sat together in court no words passed between them, and they didn't even look at each other. Both said they would have no difficulty in giving bail.

Bonds for Hussey and Murtha were furnished by the National Surety Company. Hussey turned his back on Murtha in the bail clerks office and aboved him out of the way as they were leaving the room.
